How Racist Was Flannery O ' Connor? | The New Yorker
Flannery O ' Connor (March 25, 1925 – August 3, 1964) is uncharacteristic of her age. In writing about the pervasive disbelief in the Christian mysteries during modern times, O ' Connor seems better suited to the Middle Ages in her rather old-fashioned and conventional Catholic and Christian conviction that the central issue in human existence is salvation through Christ.

Flannery O'Connor - Wikipedia

Flannery O'Connor needs no review -- her greatness has been well-established since the 1950's. She writes, as she so famously stated, about the operation of Grace in a territory that is largely held by the Devil. Her characters are misfits and crazies, and she is always interesting to read sentence by sentence.
