By 5 years of age, most children can understand the difference between a temporary separation and death. They know that death is irreversible and universal, has a cause, and involves permanent separation and that dead people differ from live people in several respects: they are immobile, unfeeling, and cannot hear, see, smell, or speak.

The Oxford Book of Death by D.J. Enright - Goodreads
The Oxford Book of Death, chosen and edited by the poet D. J. Enright, does not take specific aim at students and teachers of medical humanities Å—the book's potential audience is far wider. But in my view Enright's anthology is the finest existing collection of literary perspectives on a topic crucial to medicine.
