Placenta previa - Symptoms and causes - Mayo Clinic

Placenta previa can also cause excessive bleeding in the mother when the cervix begins to thin and open in preparation for delivery. The risk of developing placenta previa is higher in women who've had more than one child, a cesarean delivery, surgery on the uterus, or who are carrying twins or triplets.

Delayed Umbilical Cord Clamping After Birth.

ABSTRACT: Delayed umbilical cord clamping appears to be beneficial for term and preterm infants. In term infants, delayed umbilical cord clamping increases hemoglobin levels at birth and improves iron stores in the first several months of life, which may have a favorable effect on developmental outcomes.
