Book 1, Chapter 1. According to Aristotle , every craft, line of inquiry, action, and decision seeks some end , or “ good ,” but these goods differ. For example, health is the end of medicine, a boat the end of boatbuilding, and victory the end of generalship.

SparkNotes: Nicomachean Ethics: Book I

Aristotle begins his study on ethics by asserting that there is some ultimate good which is both complete and self-sufficient, and defines this good as happiness. There must be one final end of all human actions, because a human action by definition is one that is done on purpose and for a definite goal.
