I had bought the 2nd hand Audiolab 8000A at RM 1200 (~USD 340) in Malaysia about 2 months ago. The version I bought is without the video input connector (s/n 891042, could be product ~1995?) (there is a newer version with video input, s/n have a "b" in the middle).

Lo folks, I'm interested in getting an Audiolab pre/power combination and was looking at buying a 2nd hand 8000A integrated (60w) and then in the hopefully not too distant future upgrading with a 8000P power amp (100w), using the pre-amp section of the 8000A (and possibly playing with bi-amping using both available power amp's).

Hi all, over this week I've been trying the preamps and low and behold, I've decided to keep the Audiolab 8000C. Seems to feed the Kabers with a very balanced and smooth signal. The NAD is good as well but just a tad bright in my system. The Rotel has been left somewhere around the last bend. It's completely out of the running.

Seandtaylor is correct, had an Audiolab 8000c from new for over 10 years, sold it to a friend 4 years ago, still going strong. Its pretty neutral has a good phono stage and performs way above its price range. If it is at a reasonable price buy it. Here in the UK Audiolab amps hold their prices well and are much sought after.

The 8000P with the 8000C or the 8000A as a preamp. is a good match. Good sound. No negative critics. I cannot see how a $10 000 amp an pream. can sound better.
