Alastair Reynolds
Alastair Reynolds is a British author of fiction. Born in 1966, he is known for his writing mainly in the science fiction genre. He is an interesting author since he used to be a space scientist and now is a full-time writer, even though for a time the two activities were running parallel.

I thought I'd take a few hours to update the site as we go into the New Year. There's been very little news worth reporting since the last entry: the life of the average writer really isn't that remarkable for long stretches of time.

Alastair Reynolds is a former research astronomer with the European Space Agency, and now prolific hard-sf/space opera writer, best known for his Revelation Space novels and stories, which I have previously read. Century Rain is a 2004 stand-alone novel, and not set in his Revelation Space universe. I read it in paperback.

Century Rain (2004) | Alastair Reynolds
I've voraciously consumed science fiction since I was a teenager (that's a long time) and Century Rain ranks up there with the best. The concept that Alastair Reynolds bases this novel on will twist your brain inside out as you begin to understand the reality he has created.

Century Rain (Audiobook) by Alastair Reynolds | Audible.com
Alastair Reynolds is a top-tier "Hard" Science Fiction writer, and Century Rain is clever blending of Murder-Mystery with his forte genre. There's even a bit of Romance in the story, but don't worry, this is first and foremost a Sci-Fi tale.

Hamilcar's Books: Century Rain - Alastair Reynolds
Nice review! I read Century Rain a long time ago, long enough that I don't remember much about it except that interesting duplicate Earth premise, and the nanotechnology angle. It's the latter aspect that fascinates me—I rediscovered Alastair Reynolds through House of Suns, and now I want to read (or in the case of this book, re-read) his entire oeuvre.
