Disgruntled Asali Solomon

Disgruntled, by Asali Solomon, is a coming of age story set in the late 20th century, but also an odyssey through a series of strange and confusing contexts that help Kenya, the central character, set a course for her life. These strange situations seem both to be the problem she is attempting to avoid – earnest meetings of a Afrocentric group, a polygamous commune, a prep school, a goalless ...

I go back to these two novels three decades later because they seem to be the works that paved the ground that Asali Solomon covers in Disgruntled. Like Sarah Phillips, Disgruntled's protagonist Kenya spends most of her formative years in an upper-middle-class Philadelphia suburb, navigating the pressures of an elite private school education.
