The second is an act of professional writing. That is why it is so much more difficult. The first time around, the only person you're accountable to – if you write, if you don't write, if you spend an entire day in your pyjamas watching Fringe – is yourself. But, if by some miracle, your writing gets out there, and then, through luck and chance and talent and a perfect storm of right-place-right-time, it does well, then the layers of accountability pile up and up, and there are ...
