Letters From A War Zone

Letters From A War Zone details the very sad and very real struggles of one-half of the human population to be treated as equals by the other half. Fiercely intelligent and never mincing her words, Dworkin challenges the hurtful and dehumanizing norms in our society which keep individuals of both genders, but particularly females, from living peacefully and to their fullest potential.

'Letters From a War Zone' - The New York Times have never been published in the United States; one, 'Letter from a War Zone', has been published in German and in Norwegian but never in English; and two (one on Wuthering Heights and one on Voyage in the Dark) were written for this collection. None of these pieces, despite repeated efforts over years, were published in The Nation, The
