On the flip-side, "much appreciated" can be a slightly more formal way of addressing people in an otherwise informal dialogue. It can be a quick reply to a friend for taking care of something for you or for providing you with needed information. It can also be a way to acknowledge very casually the work someone has been doing.

MetaTrader 5 Help

I'd say "Much appreciated" is a casual sign-off that should be used for expressing gratitude for favors, like trying to confirm with someone to be a reference for your letter of recommendation or basically asking of someone to do a favor, like babysitting, housekeeping, etc. and once the favor is accepted the response would sign-off with a "thank you" to redeem any sense of expressed gratitude as genuine.
