Nation Maker: Sir John A. Macdonald: His Life, Our Times ...

Nation Maker, by Richard Gwyn. The Man Who Made Us. This work covers 1867 to 1891, from just after Confederation to Macdonald's death. The focal achievement chronicled in John A. was Confederation, and the uniting of four disparate British colonies into a single political entity of astonishing potential.

Richard Gwyn: The Nation Maker

Gwyn is at his best when describing what Macdonald was like, and that is no easy task, because Sir John A. was a far more complex person than most Canadians realize. He is remembered today largely as an old drunk, and Gwyn explores this subject with startling frankness. Macdonald ' s binges were not just the source of colourful anecdotes,...
