Pentax ME Super Review - Ken Rockwell

Many 100mm f/2.8 macro lenses also make fine portrait lenses on a FF (35mm) camera body like your Pentax K1000. The great thing about going this route is you also get a lens capable of serious closeups at the same time. Sigma made some very good 100 or 105mm f/2.8 vintage offerings in the Pentax K-mount, as have other brands.

I never really learned how to use the camera but did shoot a video background subject in RAW in order to get the detail needed for a 60 x 48 backdrop enlargement. Still learning the controls on this camera. I feel like I need to get a degree from the Pentax night school before I can operate it. My old K1000 seems like a Model T by comparison.
