Our interest doesn't translate (except in limited ways that can be interesting). The readers of AD are either people looking for ideas, or designers whose works are appearing there as a credential. Haven't read that magazine in a decade or more. If they did a section on integrating sound and room, that could be fun.

What in the world is the Mandela Effect? In a nutshell, it's having memories that don't match with current reality and history. Fiona Broome, one of the people who coined the term, launched a website in 2009 to document the phenomenon, explains that the Mandela Effect "is what happens when someone has a clear memory of something that never happened in this reality."
