River of Fire - A Review by Jafar Abbas: Qurratulain Hyder is one of the few living Urdu writers whose work can be placed along with the very best in world literature. Her novel Aag ka Darya, first published in 1959, is without question the most important novel of 20th century Urdu literature. Not too long ago, the author herself, who writes equally well in English, has "transcreated" this novel as the River of Fire.

Aag Ka Darya - Wikipedia

Of all the novels about India, its history, and the richness of its culture, River of Fire is probably the most complex but also the most expansive and, at times, lyrical. This is the English version of Aag Ka Darya (Published in 1959) and even though there is always a loss in the act of translation, the novel still carries the narrative beauty of the original.
