I intended to purchase a repair manual and I ended up downloading an owners manual. A document, by the way, that is available for free at the manufacturer's website but for which emanualonline charges $14.99. In any case, I requested a store credit so I can pay the additional amount for the service manual.

I've used them over the years both alone and along with a OEM manual. I can only specifically recall my most recent use, with a first generation KLR 650. This was my second KLR and I recalled from my first in the early '90's that the factory manual was 2 parts, the first was a KLR 600 manual and the second was all the changes for the 650.
