The American Senator Anthony Trollope

The American Senator is a novel written in 1875 by Anthony Trollope. Although not one of Trollope's better-known works, it is notable for its depictions of rural English life and for its many detailed fox hunting scenes. In its anti-heroine, Arabella Trefoil, it presents a scathing but ultimately sympathetic portrayal of a woman who has abandoned virtually all scruples in her quest for a husband.

"Lady Anna" (1874) is a novel by Anthony Trollope. It describes Lady Anna's attempts to resolve the conflict between her duty to her social class and her duty to the man she loves. The story takes place at about the time of the First Reform Act of 1832. Lady Anna is the daughter of the late Earl Lovel.

The American Senator - Wikipedia

The typical thread of romantic fiction where a seemingly unconquerable barrier exists between lovers is overcome in the final chapter, is paralleled by the opinions of the American Senator who cannot believe the inequality that exists in the justice, parliamentary and religious systems (to name a few) that prevail in 19th century England.

The American Senator / Anthony Trollope - eBooks

The American Senator had formed his opinions of English rural life through his acquaintance with John Morton's friends, and concluded his visit to England with a lecture in St. James Hall in which he frankly but good-humoredly criticized English manners and customs. The speech was not well received by some of the audience,...

The American Senator of the title is a stuffy, boring old man who wants to understand English politics and morality but also wants to impose his own morality upon the English. Sadly, the book could have been far more exciting without this character. On the other hand, the characters remaining are interesting enough.

I always enjoy Trollope, and this one offers an outsider's view (the American Senator, Mr Gotobed) of some of the absurdities of Victorian England - many of which still exist! It also offers the excitement of the chase - both in the hunting scenes and in Arabella Trefoil's attempts to capture a husband - not a slow moment!
