The Faith of Christ

Michael Bird writes : "Faith in Christ means entrusting ourselves to the event of the gospel, which includes the theocentric act of deliverance wrought by God in Jesus which includes his coming, faithfulness, death, and resurrection. Thus, I would say that Jesus' faithfulness is implied not in the noun pistis but in christos."

The Church of Jesus Christ (Bickertonite) - Wikipedia

A matter of greater controversy within the religious community is the nature of faith. Many apparently entertain the illusion that redemptive faith is merely a willing disposition to trust in Christ as one's Savior, independent of any further acts of obedience. Such a notion is quite alien to the truth.

The Faith Of Christ

The Faith of Christ I can remember the first time I saw the phrase "faith of Christ" outside the Bible. It was when the Scottish theologian T. F. Torrance, arguably the most famous Barthian in the world, wrote that we are not saved by our faith but "by the faith of Christ".

"Faith IN Christ" or "Faithfulness OF Christ"

The modern versions change the phrase "faith of Christ" to "faith in Christ" throughout, which overwhelms the passage with redundancy. Paul never intended the emphasis to be upon what man has achieved, but instead what the Savior has accomplished on his behalf. The apostle here is clearly contrasting these two phrases.
