People involved in pony-play ("ponies") generally divide themselves to three groups [unreliable source?] although some will participate in more than one category: Cart ponies pull a sulky with their owner. Riding ponies are ridden, either on all fours or on two legs, with the "rider" on the shoulders of the "pony" (also known as Shoulder riding). Note that a human back is generally not strong enough to take the weight of another adult without risk of injury, so four-legged "riding" is ...
