The Moonspinners by Mary Stewart - Goodreads

As much as 'The Moonspinners' was my first Mary Stewart (age12) it is 'This Rough Magic' that is my absolute favourite. The combination of mystery, romance, Shakespeare's 'The Tempest' set on the island of Corfu set me on the lifelong path of being 'a reader', as well as giving me the itch to travel, to see for myself all the wonders an author brought into my world.

REVIEW: The Moonspinners by Mary Stewart

The Moonspinners is awesome, one of Stewart's best. Nicola is a young woman on holiday from her job at the Embassy in Greece, who agrees to meet up with an older friend on Crete. She arrives and goes exploring in the mountains above the village where she will be staying.

The Moon-Spinners book by Mary Stewart - Thriftbooks

It certainly doesn't hurt that The Moon-Spinners is quite beautifully written for its genre, in what I've come to realize is Mary Stewart's trademark detailed travelogue style. It assumes a certain intellectual and general knowledge among its readers, and refuses (for example) to reference in-text literary allusions, assuming our familiarity with them, something I always appreciate when done in this fashion, as a natural part of the narrator's voice.
