Duong Thu Huong's The Zenith (Viking, 528 pp., $32.95) is a complex doorstop of a novel that examines the lives and thoughts of a group of top Vietnamese leaders of the 1950s and 1960s. The cliché "It's lonely at the top" sums up one of the main points of the book, but also gives little of the sense of this enormous novel.

by Duong Thu Huong, translated by Nina McPherson, Phan Huy Duong "Rambling but fascinating foray into little-charted territory: the trauma wrought by the Vietnam War on its 'winners.'" In dissident Huong's latest fiction set in postwar Vietnam (Beyond Illusions , 2001 etc.), a woman's veteran husband, presumed dead, returns after a 14-year absence.

The Zenith by Duong Thu Huong | Fiction Writers Review

Huong's lyrical narrative, developed at a deliberate pace, is sometimes reminiscent of Hermann Broch's The Death of Virgil, that classic 1945 novel that imagined, from the ruins of Europe, the early years of the Roman Empire from the point of view of someone not quite at the center of power who stands in the presence of those who control it absolutely.
