The Philippines: A Past Revisited By Renato Constantino ...

Renato Constantino, in his landmark 1968 essay "Veneration Without Understanding," argued that Rizal was against the revolution.

Constantino based this view on a document Rizal issued in December 1896, asking the Katipuneros to lay down their arms and condemning the violence that was planned without his knowledge and consent.

Reform and revolution | Inquirer Opinion

This is proof that Renato Constantino's influence as a scholar and thinker is still felt to this day. His 1969 Rizal Day lecture titled "Veneration without understanding" is still often quoted in its arguments about Rizal's heroism. Contrary to popular belief, Constantino did not question Rizal's heroism per se, but questioned whether ...
